Gold art can't be rushed

Heart

Barrett Reese explains a few of his techniques for designing textures on gold jewelry using a few of his tools (above). Some of the drill bits used by Reese are the same as in dentists' offices (at right). On the cover: Reese, Upland's goldsmith.

Barrett W. Reese is a man at peace with the world.

He has to be. The slightest twitch or movement can ruin an intricate design in a handmade gold chain, bracelet or ring.

Every curve and texture is personally designed, molded and embedded by Reese, a self-taught goldsmith.

Each piece at his Upland shop, 499 N. Central Ave., carries his personal touch, something lacking in machine-made, commercial jewelry.

Reese explains machines are limited in what they can manufacture. The 42-year-old Upland resident is limited only by his imagination and the natural restraints on gold, the softest of metals.

The identical nature of mass-produced jewelry can cast a cold shadow on a precious metal that is considered to be "warm," says Reese.

There's no personality to the pieces, no memory of the hours spent molding beautiful jewelry from small gold chips.

The tedious work seems to make handmade jewelry all the more valuable.

"There are times I've had to put something down and wait until I got my sanity back before I could pick it up again," says Reese.

Despite the hard work, Reese considers himself a lucky man. He has turned a 12-year love affair into a profitable business. And he's one of the few goldsmiths in Southern California.

It's not hard to imagine falling in love with gold, the elusive maiden that lured hundreds of old-time pioneers to California.

"It has a marvelous luster," says Reese. "You can achieve a brilliance that just screams back at you."

But there are other attributes that perhaps only a jeweler, or a goldsmith, can appreciate.

Gold is the most "malleable and ductile of metals," meaning it can be easily hammered into a sheet or drawn into a thin wire.

The local romance began in a classroom at Cal Poly Pomona, where Reese was working on a craft project.

From that first ring, he knew it was love. Reese never finished college, but he has received degrees in gemology. Most of his goldsmithing is self-taught.

"Designing for me is very unstructured," says Reese. "I tend to not design for a period of time and then the dam will burst."

There are two methods of creating a piece of jewelry. The traditional way is to draw the design and create a wax mold.

of Gold

Reese likes the other option: Take a piece of gold, some tools — also handmade — and see what develops. No particular rhyme or reason governs his artwork.

"I just relate to the metal," he says. "I can achieve a texture that's different than commercial jewelry made by machines."

His products sell for between $400 and $600 without gems. Clients from throughout the country have purchased jewelry from the business that started over Reese's kitchen table.

He later leased a 200-square-foot nook at Griswold's Inn in Claremont for 10 years and finally opened his Upland store.

In the gold business, there is no such thing as waste. Everything is saved.

Special traps are built in the sink to capture small particles of gold; carpets are carefully cleaned and vacuum cleaner bags saved.

Gold dust from his work bench is stored in small vials.

Reese says old pieces of carpet or anything thought to contain gold dust is taken to a refinery and incinerated. The gold is salvaged from the ashes.

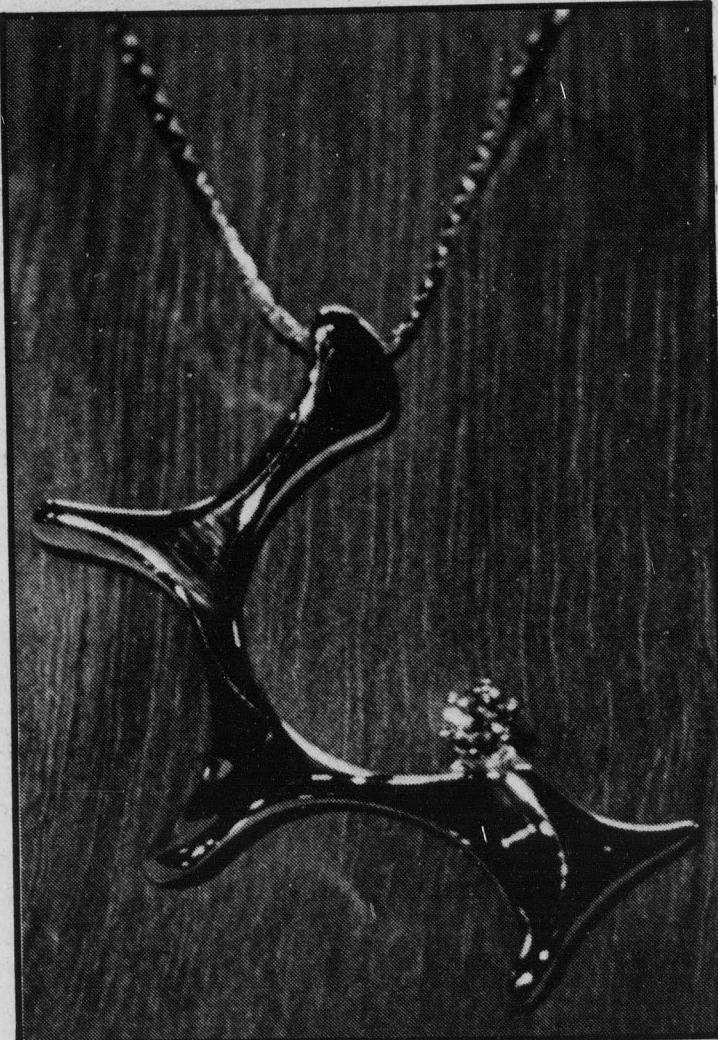

Although his shop specializes in handmade gold jewelry from 14 to 22 karats, Reese carries a few commercially made items.

They are easy to spot.

They're the pendants saying "Foxy Lady" or "Ski Bunny" and the rings that leave you with the feeling you've seen them somewhere else.

Considering the individuality of mass-produced items, you probably have.

Reese pokes at a gold ring with a small handtool, achieving a special texture (top). He then steam cleans the ring (middle left) and then finishes it off and buffs the finished product (middle right). At left one of Reese's "masterpieces" is displayed.

Song-and-dance man hoofs it for chamber

By Tony Saavedra

It's been a long time since Upland Chamber of Commerce director Tony Malone gave up show business.

But he can still do a song-and-dance routine. Witness his lobbying sessions with city, county and state officials over such issues as the Foothill Freeway extension or a once-proposed city utilities tax.

It would be an exaggeration to describe Malone as a walking E.F. Hutton commercial — but not by much.

Somehow the chamber's viewpoint on local issues is always known and always considered by city officials. Few times is it crossed.

At least it seems that way.

Malone, 49, gives much of the credit to his board of directors and the business leaders of the community. But an engine is only as good as its spark plugs. The energy has got to start somewhere. In Upland's business community, it starts with Malone.

Such bouquets might embarrass some, but Malone is accustomed to the spotlight. You might say fame runs in the family.

He was born in Massachusetts and raised in New York City, the son of a highly-successful nightclub act: Ron Wise Jr. and June Mann, alias Anthony and June Malone.

During the 1930s and 40s, Malone grew up beneath the neon lights of Broadway, attending a school for the children of entertainers.

"When I was 10 my dad would tell me to get on the subway and meet him down at 42nd Street and Broadway," recalls Malone.

He was a child in the Mecca of musicals and drama, songs and entertainment. Party invitations from his parents were addressed to the likes of Artie Shaw, Glen Miller and Ava Gardner.

At a time when young "Shirley Temples" were shuffling off to Buffalo and maybe stardom, Malone aspired to become an entertainer — like his mom, dad and paternal grandfather.

"I tried out for all the plays on Broadway — and never made any of them. You follow me?"

And so a teenage Malone was sent by his parents to live with his maternal grandfather at a chicken farm in Fontana, California.

"Start spreading the news, I'm leaving today" are the words immortalized by song. But they glorify leaving somewhere like Fontana and going to New York City, not the reverse.

"When I came out here I thought I had come to the end of the world," says Malone, emphasizing his shock with a high-pitched laugh sounding more like a whoop.

"My parents thought it was better for me to be put here in God's country."

Ah, wilderness. No bright lights. No celebrity acquaintances.

Just Fontana and chickens — and sports.

Malone soon became a star athlete at Chaffey High School, but he didn't lose his penchant for performing.

"I was torn between showbiz, playing football and whatever. I knew I wanted to be something, I just didn't know what. You follow me?"

Graduating from high school in 1953, he went to college for a bit and then discovered what he would be: an insurance salesman.

He opened his own office and later became a partner in Chaffey Insurance Associates in Ontario.

It wasn't long before Malone was sought by the local Junior Chamber of Commerce or Jaycees.

It was in the Upland Jaycees that Malone met a young attorney named Hal Bailin.

Malone impressed Bailin with his energy and leadership abilities.

"Virtually any major civic event either involved him or was lead by him," remembers an older Bailin, president of the local Rotary Club and partner with Covington & Crowe law firm.

Bailin also recalls his friend's sense of humor, evidenced by the time Malone played bullfighter with a police car in Bakersfield.

Whattaguy.

Playing matchmaker, Bailin in 1965 set up a job interview for Malone with the Upland chamber. He didn't tell Malone until after making the appointment.

"I knew there was an opening and I knew he was available, so I just put them together," says Bailin, adding with a laugh, "We've been in trouble ever since."

Part of Malone's success has been attributed to his tenacity, a characteristic that was evident in his high school days.

"He was a real live wire. If something intrigued him he would follow it to death," says Glenn Fisher, Upland High School principal and Malone's former history teacher at Chaffey High.

"He was very inventive and had a real inquisitive mind," says Fisher. Such dedication to an issue

Books help fight sexual abuse in children

By Maureen Bartolotta
Upland Public Library
Reference Librarian

In the wake of recent television movies there has been an increase in the public awareness of the sexual abuse and disappearance of children. While it may not be a pleasant topic to confront, it is one that every parent and other adults in positions of responsibility must deal with.

Sexual abuse of children is increasing in epidemic proportions. Estimates suggest that as many as 1 million children are molested each year, with one out of every four children being victims before adulthood. An equally shocking estimate is that two out of three children fail to report molestation even to their parents. An estimated 10 percent of all children are victims of incest, with females outnumbering males 10 to 1.

While books alone can't solve the problem, knowledge can be a powerful weapon. Children can be taught skills to help protect themselves and can be encouraged to recognize their rights and to tell others if they've been victimized. Parents and other responsible adults can learn how to remain open and sensitive, as well as learn some of the warning signs that are often a clue that something is wrong.

Any adult that suspects the worst can find concrete advice on how to proceed, both legally and psychologically with the child.

Although some view this as a family problem, the family is the basic component of our society and it is the responsibility of all to help recognize and explore the causes and consequences of the problem.

Two very new books on the subject that are aimed at younger audiences are "The Dangers of Strangers," by Kathryn Goldner and Carol Vogel, and "No More Secrets for Me," by Oralee Wachter.

"The Dangers of Strangers" is a picture book for 5- to 8-year-olds. It describes a variety of situations and discusses the various motives and arguments a stranger might use to lure a child. "No More Secrets For Me," which is aimed at a little older audience, is a collection of four brief stories that portray sexual abuse situations. Each story illustrates why telling someone about the "secret" is important. Both of these new books are currently on order.

"Let's Talk About It," by Dr. Michael Pall, is a book for children and parents about child abuse and neglect. It attempts to help give abused children and abusing parents a better understanding of why they feel the way they do; why they do some of the things they do; and what they can do to stop hurting. For those who have never been in the situation, it gives a better understanding of the problems, feelings and behaviors involved.

"Nor More Secrets, Protecting your Child From Sexual Assault," by Caren Adams and Jennifer Fey, is an excellent manual for parents and children up to about age 12. Any parent who is armed with this book and has taken the time to go over it with his child could at least rest a little easier.

Chapter titles include: "What is the Sexual Assault of a Child?," "How Can I Protect My Child?," "Where Do I Begin?," "What Do I Say?," and "What If My Child Has Been Assaulted?"

Another aspect of the problem is helping the adults who have grown up as victims. "Daddy's Girl," by Charlotte Vale Allen and "Father's Day's," by Katherine Brady, are two moving personal narratives of incest. Many other books are available which reveal the experiences and feelings of those who have endured abuse and neglect.

While none of the library staff are trained to intervene or advise those in abusive situations, we are committed to helping people find information or suggest possible support groups or agencies which could help. Our Community Resources Directory and the 1984 Women's Yellow Pages are but two sources we have available to assist those in the West Valley area in finding help. Should a less visible approach be desired, Parents Anonymous has a 24-hour, toll-free telephone number: (800) 352-0386, from which local referrals may be made.

Law sets sights on uninsured motorists

A tough new law to penalize motorists who drive without automobile insurance took effect Jan. 1, according to representatives of the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department.

This new law states uninsured motorists who are involved in a reportable accident face a mandatory one-year cutoff of driving privileges. Reportable accidents are those resulting in bodily injury or involving property damage which exceeds $500.

If the motorist is still driving without insurance, after the one-year period, he will face an additional three-year suspension of his drivers' license.

If, during the three-year suspension, the motorist furnishes proof of financial responsibility, usually in the form of insurance, he can have his license reinstated.

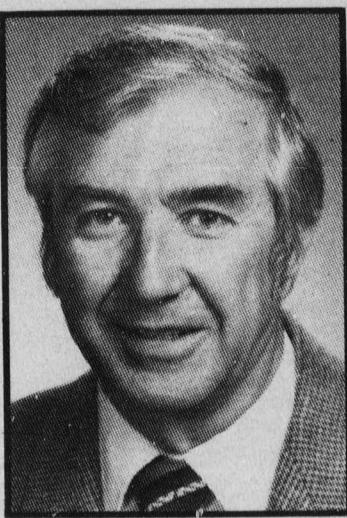

As of July 1, this law will require insurers to offer additional coverage for payment of the deductible in the event an insured motorist is involved in a traffic collision with an uninsured motorist.

This law is in response to the complaints by thousands of motorists who were involved in collisions with uninsured motorists and couldn't collect compensation.

California's "ten worst areas," containing the largest number of uninsured motorists, are all in Los Angeles County.

For more information concerning traffic safety or crime prevention programs, contact your local law enforcement agency or the Rancho Cucamonga Sheriff's Station Crime Prevention Unit at 989-6611.

Upland resident named to position with Pomona's General Dynamics

Thomas Lewis

Thomas V. Lewis, Upland, has been named director of preliminary design and advanced projects at General Dynamics Pomona Division.

In his position, Lewis, who was formerly director, advanced fire control, will be responsible for the direction of the preliminary design section, including technical interface with the military in new business.

Lewis began with GD as a design engineer in 1960. Since that time he has held a variety of engineering and management assignments, many of which involved work on advanced gun concepts.

He earned a bachelor of science in mechanical engineering at Cal State LA in 1960 and a Master's in engineering from UCLA in 1972.

He lives in Upland with his wife Marita Carol and his four children.

SCHOOLS

CNA graduates

Chaffey Adult School graduated 20 students from its Certified Nurse Assistant (CNA) program.

Those receiving certificates included Jackie Arnett, Dennis Betz, Gerry Boshart, Marilyn Boyd, Linda Buchanan, Lucy Carrillo, Dawne Gibbs, Tammie Kreider and Susan Magri.

Others were Marie Martell, Barbara Maxfeldt, Tammy McLaughlin, Diane Mills, Debbie O'Connor, Maria Perez, Andrea Persinger, Sally Pizano, Mary Rhoades, Delores Thompson and Tracey Westwood.

Graduates of this program have completed 100 hours of nursing training at Claremont Manor Hospital. In addition, more than 100 hours of classroom instruction have been completed.

This is a state-certified program and all students have completed the minimum state requirements for nurse assistants.

Jasper super citizens

Jasper School in Alta Loma is home to Super Citizens of the Month. Two students from each classroom are honored during an assembly with a certificate of recognition for being outstanding citizens by Principal B.A. Schmidt.

In grades kindergarten through third, students honored were: James Carr, Anna Dowse, Bobby Wyckoff, Amanda Baunsgard, Tyler Simpkins, Emilie Summers, Michael Malicke, Adrienne Ferradino, Jeremy Duke, Karem Lam, Travis Larson, Amanda Spoor,

If, during the three-year suspension, the motorist furnishes proof of financial responsibility, usually in the form of insurance, he can have his license reinstated.

As of July 1, this law will require insurers to offer additional coverage for payment of the deductible in the event an insured motorist is involved in a traffic collision with an uninsured motorist.

Classic 1941 Buick convertible donated for sale

Ralph and Avis Brumbaugh, longtime Upland residents and members of the Upland Brethren in Christ Church, have donated this year's featured 1941 Buick for the West coast Mennonite Relief Sale at Fresno Pacific College in Fresno.

This 1941 Buick Super Convertible was donated to the Mennonite Relief Sale by Upland residents Ralph and Avis Brumbaugh.

The classic 1941 Buick convertible super with a straight eight engine and dual carburetors is completely restored and in excellent condition.

West coast Relief Sale Chairman Ben Doerksen expressed his appreciation for the car because it will again attract the attention that has been unique for past relief sales.

"The uniqueness of this sale is in part the featured car but there will also be about 250 handmade quilts, comforters and afghans that also draw people from throughout the state to the sale," Doerksen said.

Food attractions have also been expanded this year. On Friday, April 6, a mini-auction and preview will begin with a Buffalo Barbeque Dinner and food booths. Saturday, April 7, a special traditional German meal will be featured as well as a pancake breakfast. Hispanic Mennonite and Chinese Mennonite churches are providing food from their ethnic backgrounds.

The first "Run for Relief" will also be held this year with a 10 K race and a two mile fun run planned. Both will begin and end at the college campus.

Proceeds from the sale will go to the West Coast Mennonite Central Committee. The Mennonite Central Committee is a worldwide relief and development agency sponsored by Mennonite and Brethren in Christ churches. It seeks to provide food, clothing and shelter to needy people around the world.

YOUR FIRST CHILD AND THE NEW BABY

The introduction of a new baby into the family, and the concomitant loss of the parents' undivided attention, is often the biggest insult a child will ever have to face. The child cannot help but feel at some level that he has failed to be fully satisfactory, or to feel betrayed by his parents' obvious love affair with a strange. Living through these feelings—learning to share with, and ultimately love the new sibling—is one of the most positive coping experiences a child can have. Children need their parents' understanding in order to handle it well.

Parents should not overemphasize the positive in preparing the first child or the child will feel all the more mixed-up about, and ashamed of, his negative reactions. A sleeping infant is disappointing to the young child who has been led to expect a playmate. It is a mistake to expect, or demand, instant love and acceptance for a new baby.

It is natural for parents to feel a very strong attraction for a new infant. Suddenly the toddler seems very grown-up and competent. Parents need to make a special effort to do the things they used to do alone with their older child. They should reassure him/her and praise competencies whenever they are demonstrated rather than demand them.

Uplander becomes Big Brother

Michael Fenton, Upland, has been accepted as a volunteer Big Brother with big Brothers of Greater Los Angeles, announced BBGLA Director of Services Mark L. Wild.

After a careful screening process by a professional social work staff, Fenton has been matched with one of the hundreds of fatherless boys on the agency's waiting list.

An employee of Johnson Controls, Fenton will become the boy's role model and friend. They will spend approximately one-half day per week together and share many of the experiences typically shared by fathers and sons.

"Gentlemen start your engines" might not be heard Saturday, Feb. 11 at Vineyard Park, but the excitement of racing competition will be the same as 2 to 7 year-olds and their families gather for the Fifth Annual Big Wheel Classic. Children are divided into three divisions according to age for competition. Racing around the track in pre-race warm-up are 4 year-old Jeremy Van Veghten and Dontae Robles. The park is at 7291 Vineyard at Base Line Road, across from Alta Loma High School.

Big Wheel hotshots ready for big race

By Terri Tirella

The pit crew gathers around the racers, obstructing the view of the vehicles from the milling crowd. The smell of oil and gasoline is conspicuously absent as competitors ready for the start.

"On your marks, get set, go!"

The command is greeted with a thunderous roar from the crowd — and more than 200 racers give it all they've got for the "big race," pedaling their Big Wheel tricycles for all they're worth in Rancho Cucamonga's Fifth Annual Big Wheel Classic.

Youngsters ages 2 to 7 can compete in the event Saturday at Vineyard Park in Rancho Cucamonga, said Kevin Evans of the city's recreation department.

Children throughout the Southern California area gather for the meets. "We've had people come from San Dimas, San Bernardino, Riverside to race as well as having a lot locally," he said.

Originally a yearly event, the Big Wheel Classic is now held twice a year, Evans said.

"The first time we tried it out we had 30 people. At the second race there were 225 and, since then, it has grown into a big event," he said. "There aren't many events for children ages 2 to 7 years old."

Racers are divided into three divisions by age. Two- and 3-year-olds make up Division I, 4- to 5-year-olds are in Division II and Division III is for 6- and 7-year-olds.

Big wheelers race in individual heats of six competitors within their divisions. Winners move up and continue to race until the top five winners are decided.

Girls and boys compete with one another in the classic. "A lot of times girls are winners in the younger age groups because they are a little more coordinated and seem to be a little more aggressive in racing," Evans said.

Parents may bring their children on race day at 7:30 a.m. to sign up. Competition begins at 9:30 a.m.

The fee is $1 for every racer participating.

Each competitor receives a ribbon and the top five finishers get a medal.

"We set up an oval race course that's about 20 yards maximum and racers go around twice," said Evans.

Injuries haven't been a problem at the Big Wheel Classics because of parental interest, Evans said. "Parents make sure the kids wear long pants, heavy, long-sleeved shirts and shoes.

"We've had some nice pile-ups but never had any serious injuries," he said.

"It's hilarious to watch, especially the little ones," added Melody Van Veghten. Her son Jeremy, 4, raced in five heats at the last Big Wheel Classic.

"I brought about 10 kids to the race and they loved it. In one heat there were two kids going the wrong way. They were twins and they do everything the same way, so they thought they were doing okay," she said.

"All the kids enjoyed it so much we've decided to come again." □

Etiwanda students have fun keeping drugs off campus

By Terri Tirella

Lunch-time for students of 20-plus years ago meant discussing who was going to the dance with whom, swapping a salami sandwich for a peanut butter one and shooting a couple of baskets.

Today's younger teenagers face an intruder on campus that appears any time students have free time — including lunch. The intruder? Drugs.

A group of students at Etiwanda Intermediate School, however, have joined forces to help keep campuses clear of drug abuse.

The students took matters into their own hands after attending a drug diversion assembly presented by Deputy Anne Calinsky, crime prevention officer at Rancho Cucamonga's Sheriff's station.

Their weapon against drugs is called the "Fun at Lunch Bunch" and it was all the students' idea. "Some of the seventh- and eighth-graders talked to me about forming some type of club where they could talk about abusive substances," Principal Don Shute said.

Calinsky had shown students at Etiwanda Intermediate a two-film series on drug abuse. "I give a short presentation, show the film, and the next week follow up with the second film and discussion," the law enforcement officer said.

"The first film deals with the hazards of drug abuse, the second film shows some solutions," Calinsky said. "Peer pressure is the largest single factor in drug abuse."

Calinsky said the students at Etiwanda were very receptive and asked a lot of questions about illegal drugs.

"Generally during a drug abuse program kids sit back and say 'we already know about that,'" she said. "Questions they asked after the presentation proved they didn't know a lot, or as much as they may have thought they knew."

Calinsky said she thought it was the effectiveness of the film that brought the students around. The two-part film series is so highly valued it will be purchased with part of a $1,000 gift from (Continued on page 24)

Hospital given trauma designation

A West Covina hospital has been designated as a Level II Trauma Center by Los Angeles County and a Pomona hospital expects the same designation within the month.

Queen of the Valley Hospital in West Covina is the first facility in Los Angeles County to be designated as a Level II Trauma Center and is currently the only trauma center designated in the East San Gabriel Valley.

In the West Valley, San Antonio Community Hospital in Upland has been named a trauma care hospital by San Bernardino County. The program also is in operation in Orange County. Each county sets its own criteria for the designation of emergency room trauma units.

A requirement for Level II is to have trauma surgeons, emergency physicians, anesthesiologists, nursing personnel and operating room teams in the hospital around the clock ready to treat critically injured patients when they arrive at the emergency department.

Trauma patients are those requiring immediate medical attention to sustain life. Most are automobile accident victims or have received severe stab or gunshot wounds.

Queen of the Valley Hospital also has a heliport and MedAir helicopter service.

Both Queen of the Valley and Pomona Valley Community Hospital had previously applied for Level I designations but were denied due to the lack of surgical residency programs. This appeared to be the only criteria not met by the hospitals.

Both hospitals then applied for Level II designations. The quality of care provided to the emergency patient is the same as Level I.

Queen of the Valley Hospital is the second busiest emergency department in Los Angeles County, according to James C. Lester, hospital administrator.

Both hospitals were surveyed by a team from the American College of Surgeons.

Randell Stoll, vice president for administration at Pomona Valley Community Hospital, said:

"We are glad the county Board of Supervisors is in the process of setting up this valuable system of trauma care in this area of the county. We look forward to when we are officially designated to serve the Pomona Valley and East San Gabriel Valley areas.

"In the meantime, until formal designation, PVCH will continue to provide the high quality of trauma care it is noted for."

No other valley hospital in Los Angeles County applied for the trauma designation.

The program of designating certain hospitals at Trauma I and Trauma II has been under study in the county for more than three years. Only the major medical centers in the county were awarded the Trauma I designation last fall. The program's goal is to assure that seriously injured or ill patients will have the best possible medical care in the shortest time.

K-mart headed for Cucamonga business park

Albert & Wurzburger, AIA, has been selected to design a 35,000-square-foot retail complex within the Rancho Cucamonga Business Park, according to Steve Albert, a partner in the Los Angeles-based architectural firm.

The $3.5 million, 3.4-acre project is being developed by D. Salter & Company of West Los Angeles. Construction is scheduled to begin in May and completion is expected by the end of this year.

The retail space being designed by Albert & Wurzburger is part of a 25.5-acre retail center anchored by a 73,000-square-foot K mart department store. The center is located at the intersection of Arrow Route and Haven Avenue, in the southwest corner of the 292-acre Rancho Cucamonga Business Park, master planned by Daon Corporation.

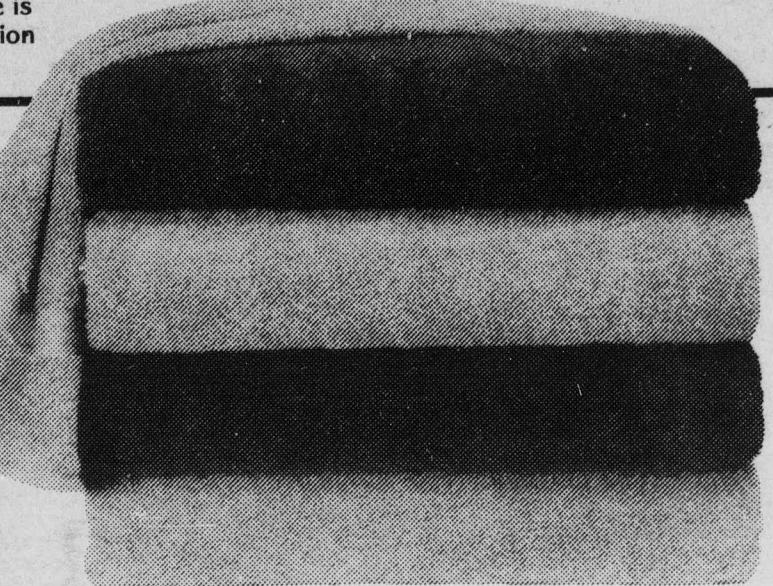

The entire development is located within a Rancho Cucamonga redevelopment area.

Players pit their wits against magical powers of darkness

By Terri Tirella

Aubrey Carroll will spend a typical Saturday afternoon cutting off the head of a dragon in the Upland Library.

The Upland High School student doesn't brandish a sword or an ax, though. He carries a board game.

Carroll is among the legions of fanatical devotees of a phenomenon that has been alternately revered as a perfect retreat from the realities of everyday life or lambasted as a destructive influence on impressionable youngsters.

Carroll plays Dungeons and Dragons.

The Upland club -- which has been meeting for two years -- gathers at the library the second and fourth Saturday of the month, noon to 5 p.m. in the multi-purpose room.

Yet the teenagers -- who range from freshmen to high school graduates -- seem to belie theories that their time-consuming devotion represents an unhealthy obsession. In a couple of cases, their parents not only support them -- they've tried the game themselves.

Player Peter Reifenrath's mother, Barbara, works at the Upland Library and has taken part in the role-playing games. She doesn't believe players get as wrapped up in their imaginary worlds as some magazine articles may lead people to believe.

"I've never seen the kids where they are really involved and they forget to eat like I've read in articles. They gauge the amount of time they play depending on how active they are in school or how many hours they are working," she said.

Carroll's mother, Gloria, has also participated in the role-playing games. Like Mrs. Reifenrath, she said she hadn't met any players who became obsessed with the games.

"People who are in any group, there are a certain percentage who don't communicate. But if teenagers don't communicate with their parents, the parents get upset and because they are playing Dungeons and Dragons with a group of friends, parents blame the game," Mrs. Carroll said.

To the uninitiated, the game may sound like a chaotic mess. To the players, it's a challenging new world that features the classic struggle between good and evil.

Players, who number around 15 at the Upland club, run characters -- with such names as Traveler, James Bond, Orcon and Room Quest -- through a variety of role-playing games. "Everything from science fiction to espionage, although most have swords and sorcerers," said Aubrey Carroll.

"One person (called the dungeon master) makes up the adventures the other characters will participate in. It can be in a castle or cave or something with rooms that have different monsters, traps or treasures," the younger Reifenrath said.

"We usually start at a local (imaginary) inn or tavern with a bulletin board on the wall and choose an adventure. We go from there," he said.

Most of the six to eight players involved in the role-playing games at the library are from Upland and Chaffey high schools, according to Mrs. Reifenrath.

The Upland Dungeons and Dragons group is predominately male, although not entirely. "Players, whether girls or boys, are more likely to be academically inclined. The girls aren't like tomboys, physically, but are tomboys of the mind. It doesn't mean they are masculine, just their minds work a little bit differently. You see the same percentage of girls interested in Dungeons and Dragons you might find in a computer class," according to Mrs. Carroll.

Her son thinks the game attracts more male players because of the violence and fierce competition. "There's a little bit of bloodshed too. Someone may cut a dragon's head off and girls don't seem to enjoy that." □

Bad attitude a good thing for grouchy group

Do you deliberately get out of bed on the wrong side?

Are you on every junk mail list in the western hemisphere, including Gay Rights for Animals and Designer Fashions for Cats? Do you mark the wrong side of the bed to be sure you get up on it each day?

Do you think that most people, if left to their own devices, wouldn't have any devices to speak of? Do you ever wonder what all those idiots are grinning about?

Well, hold it right there! There just

The West End Advocates for Special Kids (WEASK) has changed its focus and name.

The parents organization, now After WEASK, will address the needs of developmentally disabled adults and their families.

After WEASK will focus on subjects such as vocational education, employment opportunities, money management, social and recreational activities.

may be an organization right down your alley.

The Greater Grouches of America, formed late in 1983 by a group of "No Good" gourches in Lowell, N.C., is a society for people who were born in a bad mood.

The Greater Grouches of America (GGA) pledge clearly exemplifies the group's attitude: "We believe it is our inherent right to hack-off the other person; society is best served when we are hacking-off the other person; and if society does not want to be hacked-off, so what?"

Dock Ayers, a Lowell photographer, was elected president of GGA during the first official meeting in December of 1983.

"We plan to shed light on that long-neglected segment of the population, better known as gourches," Ayers said. "We're dedicated to those ill-tempered and ill-mannered gourches who have served as thorns in society's side for centuries."

During the recent awards ceremony conducted by the group, Ayers was voted Grouch of the Year for 1983. Other awards were presented, but the honorees were not present.

White House spokesman Edward Meese won the 1983 Humanitarian of the Year award for his "brilliant" observation that "there are no hungry people in America." Top vote-getter for Miss Congeniality was Joan Rivers.

From the sports world, former Ohio State football coach Woody Hayes was named Sportsman of the Decade. 1983 Sportsman of the Year went to ex-ex-ex-manager of the New York Yankees Billy Martin.

Mr. T received the award for the Most Pleasing Bad Mouth Attitude of the Year while Jesse Helms (R-N.C.) was voted Politician of the Year. James Watt was a dual winner, sweeping both Toastmaster of the Year and Environmentalist of the Year awards.

"We have our own book in the works," the president said. "It's a manual, 'Greater Grouches of America's 2,000 Different Ways to Hack-Off the Other Person,' and we hope it will help support the GGA. We've been getting by on donations but if the book doesn't help, so what? We'll get by somehow," Ayers said.

If you desire more information or would like to recognize a friend or co-worker, write to the GGA, 116 N. Main St., Lowell, N.C., 28098.

Membership includes a card, a button depicting the GGA logo and a ballot for voting the 1984 Greater Grouches of America's Awards. Membership fee is minimal.

Prescribed drugs are big factors in automobile accident statistics

Driving after drinking is a widely publicized no-no. But prescription drugs and over-the-counter medications can affect drivers also and can be contributing factors in automobile accidents, warns the Automotive Information Council.

Pain killers, tranquilizers, blood pressure medications, muscle relaxants, as well as other prescription drugs, affect a driver's ability because they can cause drowsiness, dizziness, blurred vision, confusion and lack of muscle control, the AIC points out.

Many over-the-counter remedies sold for colds or allergies can cause drowsiness and dizziness also. Other problems can occur as side effects of mixing prescribed drugs with either over-the-counter medications or alcohol.

Understand what a medication is doing to you before you drive, the AIC suggests. Ask your doctor about the drug and its possible side effects.

Heed all the small print on the labels of over-the-counter medications, adds the AIC, noting that these drugs must warn consumers of the possible side effects and the risks of taking the product.

Photographers take a shot

Professional and amateur still photographers may compete and display their photographic endeavors at the 35th International Exhibition of Photography.

This annual photographic contest will be held June 14 through July 1 at the 103rd Southern California Exposition in co-operation with the U.S. Navy's Pacific Fleet Audiovisual Command.

There are two categories: Color print and black and white (monochrome) print. Entrants may submit up to 10 prints at a fee of $3 for each entry. The deadline for entries is 5 p.m., Friday, April 27.

A six-member judging panel, all experts in the field of photography, will select the winners on May 4. Return/claim cards will be mailed Saturday, May 18. Entry forms with rules and other information are available on request by writing to the 35th International Exhibition of Photography, Entry Office, Southern California Exposition, Del Mar, Calif., 92014. Telephone numbers are (619) 297-0338, extension 14 or (619) 755-1161, (Continued on page 21)

Teen dance club aims at area youths

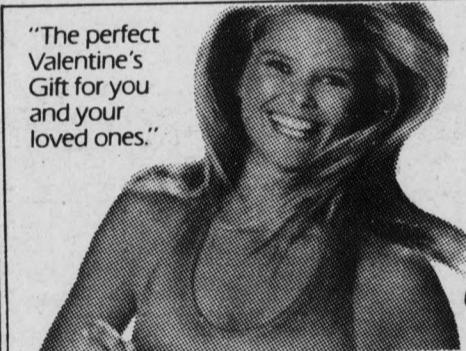

A grand opening of Grand Central Station, Southern California's largest teenage dance club, will be held the weekend of Feb. 10.

The event will begin at 8 p.m. at the club, located at 1700 W. Holt Ave., Pomona, beginning at 8 p.m.

According to owner Hal Ruppert, Grand Central Station is the first club of its type in the Pomona Valley. It is equipped with three dance floors, mirrored walls, special lighting, video monitors to let patrons dance to the top bands in the nation and a lounge and refreshment area.

"Our policy of a health-oriented, clean-air facility for teens — including a no smoking, no drugs, no alcohol atmosphere — is a definite plus for the parents of teens who want them to have a place to have fun, but not have to worry about where they are or what they are doing. We invite the parents to come and visit and see Grand Central Station," said Ruppert.

For more information, call 620-6366.

R.C. school finds punishment that works

What do schools do with youths who are truant, fight, disrupt classes or smoke cigarettes on campus?

Story by Matt Coker

Photos by Brant Clinard

A youth with a shovel and hoe (at top) is ready to take on a weed-infested embankment while this seventh-grader (above) knows the Saturday Work Day isn't a real drag since the alternative is suspension from school.

Cucamonga Junior High School puts them to work.

The school has a "Saturday Work Day" where students who would otherwise be temporarily prohibited from attending classes work on the schoolgrounds as an alternative to suspension.

The idea is not new in the West Valley, but the Central School District only started the program this year. Since October, there have been five Saturdays students have labored on the campus.

And the jobs are not easy. Weeding, washing windows, scraping gum, washing doors and picking up rubbish are all tasks students perform.

Students are not getting away with anything by working instead of missing school, insisted Dave Soden, Cucamonga Junior High's acting principal. He said the program saves money, improves the campus appearance and serves as an incentive to students to stay out of trouble.

There are no less than four and no more than 10 students assigned to Saturday work days, which are arranged according to need. The students work four-hour shifts beginning at 8 a.m. and finishing at noon. There is a 15-minute break after two hours of labor.

"I've only had one student a second time," said Soden, who started the program when he was vice principal. He is now acting principal while Sharon Nagel assumes personnel duties at the district office.

"Suspension is really a vacation to them," Soden said. The magnitude of the offense determines whether the Saturday work day is an ample option, Soden said.

"If what he has done does not harm him or the school or does not pose a major threat to any other student," Soden said, "I'll give his parents the alternative" of suspension or work.

"Most parents like to have the alternative. In most cases they feel the Saturday work day is more effective than suspension."

Since, Soden said, "so many students have both parents working (during the week), if we do suspend there could be a parental supervision problem."

And parents are not the only people in favor of the program.

Central School District administrators and school board members applaud the program because it saves money. When a youth is suspended, the district loses money appropriated by the state based on enrollment averages.

"This (program) is really cost-effective because for each day the student would be gone the school would have lost ADA (average daily attendance revenues)," Soden said.

Besides ADA revenues, the school curtails maintenance costs. Though a Saturday supervisor is paid $50 to watch the working youths, if 10 students work four hours that amounts to 40 hours worth of labor which someone would have been paid to do.

Asked to describe the program, a seventh-grade student who was weeding a dirt embankment surrounding a soccer field had a two-word answer:

Cheese giveaway slated for needy

ONTARIO — Feb. 25, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., Chaffey High School, 1245 N. Euclid Ave.

The cheese giveaway will be aimed at assisting needy, low-income residents and the unemployed. Low-income residents must meet the State Department of Education's guidelines for income. To qualify for a five-pound block of cheese, a typical family of four must have a monthly income of less than $1,032.

Proof of income and residency must be provided. Income may be verified by a paycheck stub, income tax return, Social Security check, unemployment compensation check or public assistance records which prove enrollment in such programs as: Medi-Cal, Aid to Families With Dependent Children (AFDC), food stamps, etc.

Residency may be verified by a California Driver's License or California ID, utility bills or rent receipts.

Up to 100 volunteers work each day during distributions. Volunteers come from a variety of community-based organizations, churches, clubs and senior citizen groups.

All volunteers are asked to arrive at least two hours before cheese distributions.

Students exhibit hobby collections

By Matt Coker

Dolls, baseball cards — even a rubber band collection — popped up when students showed their stuff to classmates, parents and teachers last week at a hobby show at Dona Merced Elementary School.

Sponsored for the second straight year by Dona Merced's PTA, the show offered any student with a collection of anything a chance to take part in the festivities. Two common items constituted a collection.

PTA President Diane Solarzano said the organization used to hold talent shows at the

There's no need to be blue because jewelry to become colorful for spring

There will be strong emphasis on color in jewelry for spring, reports Kae McCulloch, fashion director of the Jewelry Industry Council.

Pearls, in natural colors as well as permanently dyed hues, will be popular, with pink, gold, blue and cream making a strong showing. Colored pearls mix and match with gemstones and monochromatic or contrasting color schemes.

Colored gemstones will be used as the centerpieces of pearl necklaces, she notes. And simple strands of pearls will be embellished with faceted gold or diamond rondelles between each pearl, or stations of varicolored stones.

school, but that became "too limiting" and many students felt left out.

By being flexible enough to let collections of just about anything be displayed, Solarzano said, "just about everyone can get involved."

Tables filled with collectibles wrapped around the inside of the school's multipurpose room last year, Solarzano said. The same was true this year, but the middle of the room was also the site of hobby tables, which meant there were about double the number of exhibits this year.

And just about everything one can imagine was displayed at the hobby show. Besides plenty of doll collections and baseball cards, stuffed animals and postage stamps were abundant. Figures from the movies "E.T." and "Star Wars" were also repeated in many collections, as were "Masters of the Universe" dolls.

Some collections were provided by parents and teachers. One teacher displayed an antique doll collection.

Rather than awarding prizes for the best collections, all students who participated received red ribbons.

Classes toured the hobby show last week and parents got a chance to peek at the exhibit in a special evening show.

GLANCING BACK

By John H. Nicholson

Some of you who have recently moved into our area may occasionally be confused by the names of some of our localities. A good way to clear up any puzzlement could be to consult pages 2 and 3 of the yellow section of your local phone book.

Old-timers often refer to places like Alta Loma, Cucamonga, Etiwanda, Montclair or Diamond Bar. Until fairly recently, all of those places were county territory, not incorporated as cities. Montclair became a city in 1956. In late 1977, Alta Loma, Cucamonga and Etiwanda joined in forming the City of Rancho Cucamonga. Many folks still use the three original names, to designate districts within the new city.

Diamond Bar has tried but has never gotten enough voters in the mood to become a city. Those pages in the yellow section are also useful to find zip codes and the generalities of where the boundaries are located.

We have had some rather unusual businesses around here, that were to make average folks rich. One was the Hillcrest Rabbitry, in Alta Loma. It was the idea of a Mr. Hogan and his sister of Pasadena. With all sincerity, they started what was termed "The World's Largest Rabbitry," and it probably became just that. Located on the west side of Archibald Avenue, it was about half a mile north of 19th Street.

Students get to work

"Hard work," he said. "I thought I was going to wash windows or stuff like that, not weed. I do enough of that at home," said the youth, who was working because of a fistfight.

Asked whether he thought the program would stop him from getting suspended again, the youth said, "I'd say so."

Later, looking like a miniature James Dean, the youth said, "I might get suspended. You never know. You can't tell until it happens."

He said his parents "thought it was good" he was spending his Saturday working instead of missing school during the week.

Working a few feet away was the seventh-grader he had fought with.

"It's our policy that if both boys provoke the fight, we will suspend both of them," Soden said.

"It's better than being suspended," said the youth.

The Exposition is offering $1,000 in cash awards, including $200 Best-of-Show in each of the two categories. There will also be a number of honorable mention ribbons.

Last year, the photo exhibition drew 2,254 works from about 400 entrants — of these, more than 300 were displayed. These works included photographs from the U.S., New Zealand, Australia, India and West Germany. In 1983 attendance to the Southern California Exposition exceeded 750,000 spectators.

VALENTINE'S

a time for giving paper love

Several of the old-time fold-out valentines (left) of days gone by. Children clasp hands (below) under a symbol of the day of love.

Katy Schuchard gives Ian Wahlstrom (bottom left) a kiss for the camera. An ornate card (below) of a carriage stands up by itself when it is opened.

Valentine's Day just wouldn't be the same without those lacy, detailed cards now regarded as traditional.

Some of those ornate cards of years gone by are on display at the Chaffey Communities Cultural Center museum all this month. The cards join the displays of items used by early settlers of the area and Indian artifacts.

The museum is at 525 W. 18th St., Upland, and is open from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. every Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday.

The earliest known greeting cards were made in the 1840s in Great Britain. They were lithographed Christmas cards. The custom soon spread among other people and to the Valentine's Day holiday.

The valentines at the museum date back the first part of this century, said Bea Riggs, museum director.

Cards that fold out into three-dimensional pictures are well-represented in the collection. Most of those were made in Germany, Riggs said, though they lack a company name so it is difficult to positively identify their maker or the time they were made.

According to World Book Encyclopedia, "elaborate German mechanical valentines were the most popular of all kinds from 1890 to 1910. Angelic figures adorned many of the cards. (They) folded flat for mailing."

World Book also contains a history of Valentine's Day. The tradition probably dates back to an ancient Roman festival known as Lupercalia, according to World Book.

The Feb. 15 lovers' festival honored Juno, the Roman goddess of women and marriage, and Pan, the god of nature. Youths chose festival partners by drawing names from a box.

In the fifth century, Pope Gelasius wanted to give the festival more Christian meaning. He changed it from Lupercalia on Feb. 15 to St. Valentine's Day on Feb. 14.

Much confusion surrounds just who St. Valentine was. About the only certainty is that he was a Christian martyred in the third century, a time of great persecution for Christians in the Roman empire.

Some historians say St. Valentine was a priest of Rome who was jailed for helping Christians and beheaded in 270. Others say he was a bishop in a city near Rome, beheaded in about 273.

Still others say those two were the same man, according to World Book.

At any rate, the manner of celebration apparently continued in the same manner. In years past in England, youths would draw names from vase.

World Book quotes an 18th century account as saying social groups would meet "in the homes of the gentry" on the evening before Valentine's Day to draw names.

The young man would then wear the woman's name on his sleeve, possibly giving rise to the expression, "He wears his heart on his sleeve."

Valentine's Day became popular in the United States about the time of the Civil War. "Many valentines of that period were hand-painted," the World Book article says. "Some of the elaborate cards cost as much as $10," a considerable sum at the time.

Women often put the valentines aside after the holiday as treasured keepsakes, and many valentines have become collectors' items, according to World Book.

Chamber's man does a song-and-dance propelled Malone into the center of the crusade to build a 29-mile extension of the Foothill Freeway, from La Verne to San Bernardino.

He is the administrator for the Foothill Freeway Association booster group, and has made 56 trips to Sacramento over the last 14 years to plead the group's case before state law-makers.

Malone also represents merchants in the Route 30 Corridor Group, a coalition of local government and business leaders responsible for creating a preliminary proposal on the project.

And he's involved in promotional efforts to keep Upland's high-income populace shopping within the city, not an easy task in a town considered a bedroom community.

"It's deceiving. There's more business in Upland than people see. We've got a lot of professionals (doctors, lawyers, etc.) in town and we have a lot of financial institutions," says Malone.

With Malone's aid, the chamber also keeps watch on government regulations that could effect local business.

He says the group's clout is derived from the network of contacts made by its members as well as their ability to discuss issues.

"Our leaders are leaders in other West End organizations. We don't come in off the wall. We think things out and look at the issues," says Malone.

His exhausting schedule became even more tiring in 1982 when he contracted a disease that left him blind in the left eye.

The cornea, a covering for the lens of the eye, had deteriorated, necessitating a transplant.

Former POWs get together for meeting

The San Gabriel Chapter of American Ex-Prisoners of War Inc. will meet Thursday at 7 p.m. at the American Legion hall, 4725½ N. Main St., Baldwin Park.

Ex-POWs are invited to attend.

More information can be obtained by calling Commander Clyde Slagowski at 818-338-2281 or Thomas Martin at 621-2061.

"It's a recent film. Everybody looks like people the students know instead of women in long skirts and bobby socks or kids in 1951 cars that are in films we get from the county library," Shurte said.

The group includes more than 20 students.

"Their goal is to stop other kids from taking drugs or stop them from experimenting by using peer pressure," he said.

"At a party, if an adult were offered a drink they may say 'no thank you', that would be it, but for young people it's not as easy," he said.

Shurte said he didn't understand what prompted formation of the Fun at Lunch Bunch anti-drug group. "It came as a surprise to me, having a group come and ask 'is it OK if we organize a club to try to help other kids stop or to stop other kids from starting to abuse drugs."

It doesn't have a club framework with officers, it's more a group of 13- and 14-year-olds who want to talk about preventing drug use."

ENTERTAINMENT & DINING GUIDE

Where do you go in the Southland?

BARBERSHOP QUARTET

— Carl Walters, long-time Upland resident, directs the Pomona Valley Carousel Chorus of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barberhop Quartet Singing in America, Inc., in the 32nd Annual Barbershop Harmony show to be held in the Gardiner W. Spring Auditorium of Chaffey High School on Friday, Feb. 10 and Saturday, Feb. 11, at 8 p.m. The San Francisco Storm Door, Whale Oil Company and the Upper Classmen from Fullerton will be featured quartets. Also appearing will be valley quartets and carousel chorus. For ticket information, call Dave Cheverton, 947-7615.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON TEA CONCERTS — The San Bernardino County Museum and the Inland Master Chorale will present free tea concerts Sunday afternoons at 3 throughout the year. This month, opera encounters tea concerts will be performed on Feb. 12 by the Inland Opera Company, and "Piano-Four Hands" performed on Feb. 26 featuring Gean Percel and Jack Andriese.

PAULENE MYERS — Brings to life five black woman — three contemporary, two historical — in one-woman show "Mama," scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 10 in the University Theater. Ticket information 787-4331.

"THE STAR SPANGLED GIRL" — Neil Simon comedy presented at the Gallery Theatre in Ontario. Showtimes 7:30 p.m. on Thursdays and 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays through Feb. 25. For reservations call 986-0077.

"THE LABORS OF HERACLES" — The Firebird Theater

Company presents this production which not only introduces the student to classical Greek mythology, but helps integrate the concept of how both the arts and sports can enrich the quality of life. The Company makes the play a comedy using volunteers from the audience to play the parts of the various tasks. Finally, because the Olympics Games are coming to Los Angeles, the Company will offer some historical insights into the origin of the Olympics. All performances at 7:15 p.m. in the Recital Hall, Creative Arts Building, Cal State San Bernardino, 5500 State College Parkway, San Bernardino. 887-7757.

"DAMES AT SEA" — A long-running Broadway musical comedy that pokes fun of the wantonly splashy, all-singing/all dancing Hollywood movies of the 1930's through Feb. 19 at the Brea Civic Cultural Center, 1 Civic Center Circle, Brea. Hours are 8 p.m. Thursdays and Fridays, 2:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. on Saturdays and 5 p.m. Sundays. 879-6865.

"BUTTERFLIES ARE FREE" — A comedy by Leonard Gershe, at the Sierra Madre Playhouse presented on Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. through Feb. 18. Tickets are $5 adults, $4 seniors. The theater is located at 87 West Sierra Madre. 355-4318 for reservations and information.

I recall visiting the place, one Sunday afternoon, with my parents who wanted to see what it was all about. That was in about 1927. Acres of roof covered hutches, housing some fantastic number of chinchilla rabbits. They were large animals, with hair an inch or more long. Some does were said to have as many as 16 offspring to a litter. Those does were hard pressed to come up with enough buttons for all of those babies to nurse on.

I recently talked to C.E. (Ed) Hogankamp, of Alta Loma, who worked there when he was a young fellow. As he recalls it, investors could buy a doe for about $200. That included keep, and services of a buck, and they were expected to multiply like rabbits. Many folks bought one or more does and laid plans for spending their profits.

The pelts were in demand for ladies coats and other fur items. The rabbit meat was in good demand for dinner tables. On reaching harvesting size, the offspring were butchered. Mr. Hogan got the pelts, and investors received the returns for the meat, which was refrigerated and shipped into Los Angeles and other markets.

Then, in the early 1930s, as the big depression began to be felt, nobody seemed to want pelts or rabbit meat. Investors could come and get their animals, if they had something big enough to haul them in. Operations wound down to nothing.

The Hogans seemed to have gone into raising English Bull Dogs, near Escondido. During the Depression, with its bank failures, the dogs were probably in demand to keep thieves from the savings hidden under mattresses.

In the late 30s, a Mr. Harold Hemingway became interested in Karakul sheep, natives of southeast Asia. The pelts of day-old lambs carried an attractive, curly, dark wool. They were, for a while, quite popular for ladies wear. The sheared wool of parent sheep made long wearing fabrics.

Hemingway started a flock and set up an outlet for products at 13th Street and Benson Avenue in Upland. When success seemed inevitable, he began to sell sheep to investors who wanted in on the bonanza. One could leave the animals with Hemingway to care for and harvest, or put them on his own land. At the right time, Hemingway handled the processing. Most let him do the whole job.

The prospects were so good that a Karakul Fur Salon was opened in a former bank building at the northeast corner of B Street and Euclid Avenue in Ontario. A wide selection of other lady's wear was also offered. Pelts were even brought in from places like

For 18th time, Lowder at CC's baseball helm

By Ron Witt

One of the most satisfying elements in the life of a junior college baseball coach is seeing his graduating players go on to play at a higher level.

This year, Chaffey coach Howard Lowder can look back on his 1983 products with a special sense of pride. Of six players to complete their eligibility in Panther uniforms, all have gone on to compete elsewhere.

One of the grads, pitcher Rob Vodvarka, signed a pro contract with the Kansas City Royals. The remaining five, second baseman Steve Jackson (U. of Northern Alabama), shortstop Vic Marin (Pan American), third baseman Rick Woods (Southern U.), catcher Don Davis (UC-Irvine) and first baseman Ruben Castro (Cal Baptist), went on to four-year schools.

"We like to think that if they're good enough to play at Chaffey College, they're good enough to play anywhere," says Lowder, who turned 48 in January.

Lowder, ready to embark on his 18th season as CC's head man, hopes he has as many players from the Panthers '84 squad climb the baseball ladder as he did a year ago.

The veteran skipper will find out more about his club's prospects Feb. 17-19 when the Panthers open their season in the Palomar Tournament.

Howard Lowder

Chaffey is scheduled to face Palomar, Mira Costa and San Diego Mesa in the three-day, Friday-through-Sunday tourney.

At least one of this year's Panthers is carrying a can't-miss tag as far as a baseball future is concerned. He is UC Riverside transfer Calvin Jones, a right-handed pitcher out of Verbum Dei High School who was the No. 1 choice of the Seattle Mariners in the recent winter draft.

"He could average two strikeouts an inning," says Lowder, adding, "he already has in some outings. His velocity is up in the 90's, and he has an 83 m.p.h. forkball."

"There were 23 scouts who came to look at him one day. There wasn't any fluke about him being the No. 1 pick."

Jones, a 6-foot-2 sophomore, heads up a list of 10 mound candidates for the Panthers. Other veterans on hand are left-hander Danny Kasten (Upland), southpaw Charlie Vieira (Chaffey) and Nick Pignotti (Damien).

Kasten compiled a 3-1 ledger with a creditable 2.34 ERA last year as the Panthers posted a 23-12 record, losing to Citrus in the first round of the playoffs.

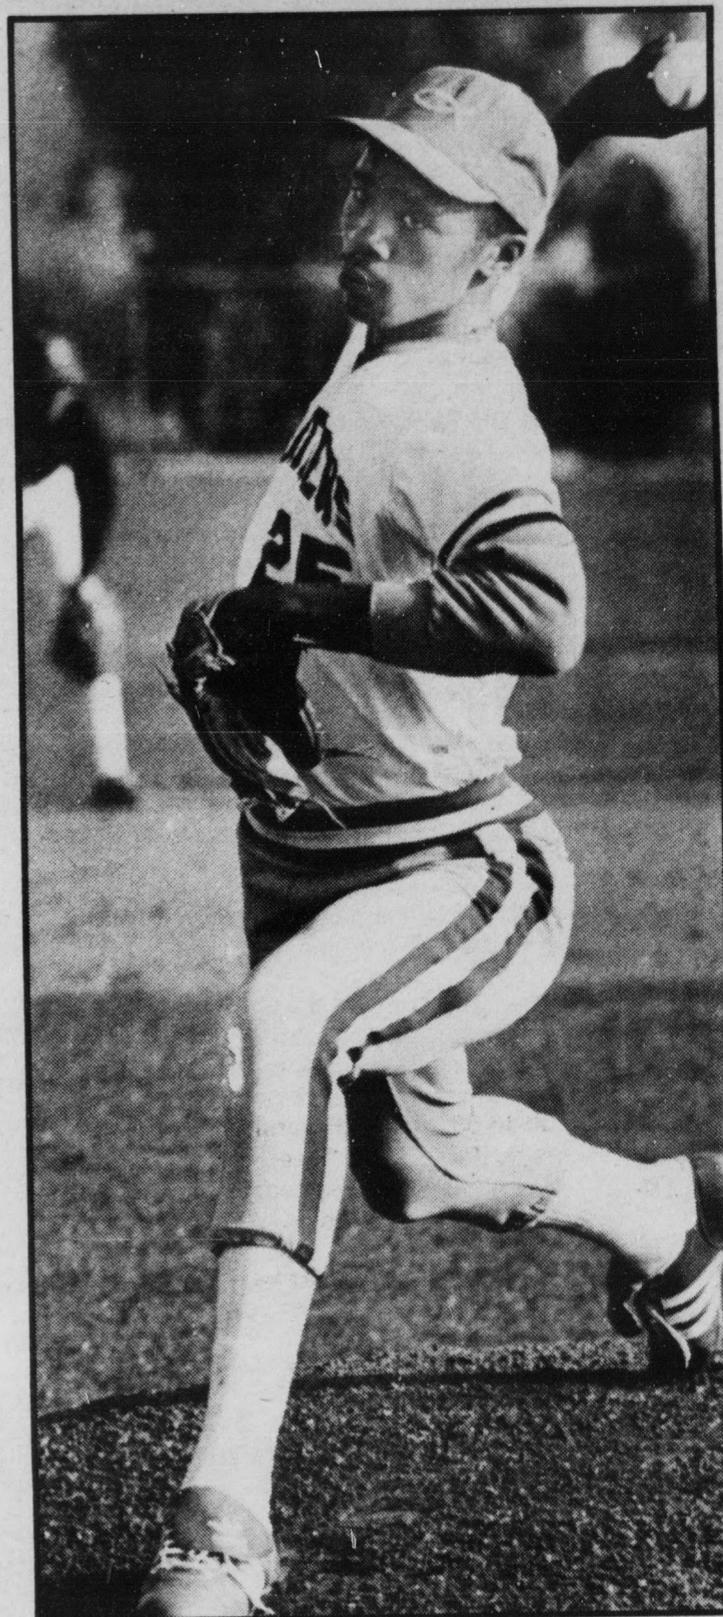

Vieira went 2-0 with a glossy 0.52 ERA, and Pignotti chalked 2-1 and 3.17 marks. The latter also had the distinction of tossing a no-hitter against Palomar.

Vieira is doubly valuable to the club because he also plays the outfield. Last year, the left-handed swinger hit .319 to earn all-conference honors as a freshman.

Rounding out the list of pitchers are freshmen Chris Spiker (Alta Loma), Tony Monge (Alta Loma), Chris Wax (Upland), Darren Manning (Don Lugo), Dominic Copas (Chaffey) and Ray King (Upland).

Wax and Pignotti also can play first base, and Copas is an outfielder.

All of the hurlers are in capable hands as Chaffey College is banking its pitching hopes this year on transfer Calvin Jones. The fire-balling right-hander was a recent number one winter draft choice by the Seattle Mariners.

Hunter prime for Olympics

By Ron Witt

When Chaffey College trainer Lloyd "Red" Hunter strode alongside American athletes into the stadium in Helsinki, Finland, for the inaugural World Track & Field Championships last August, he remembers hearing waves of cheers for the U.S. team that gave him "goose bumps up and down my neck."

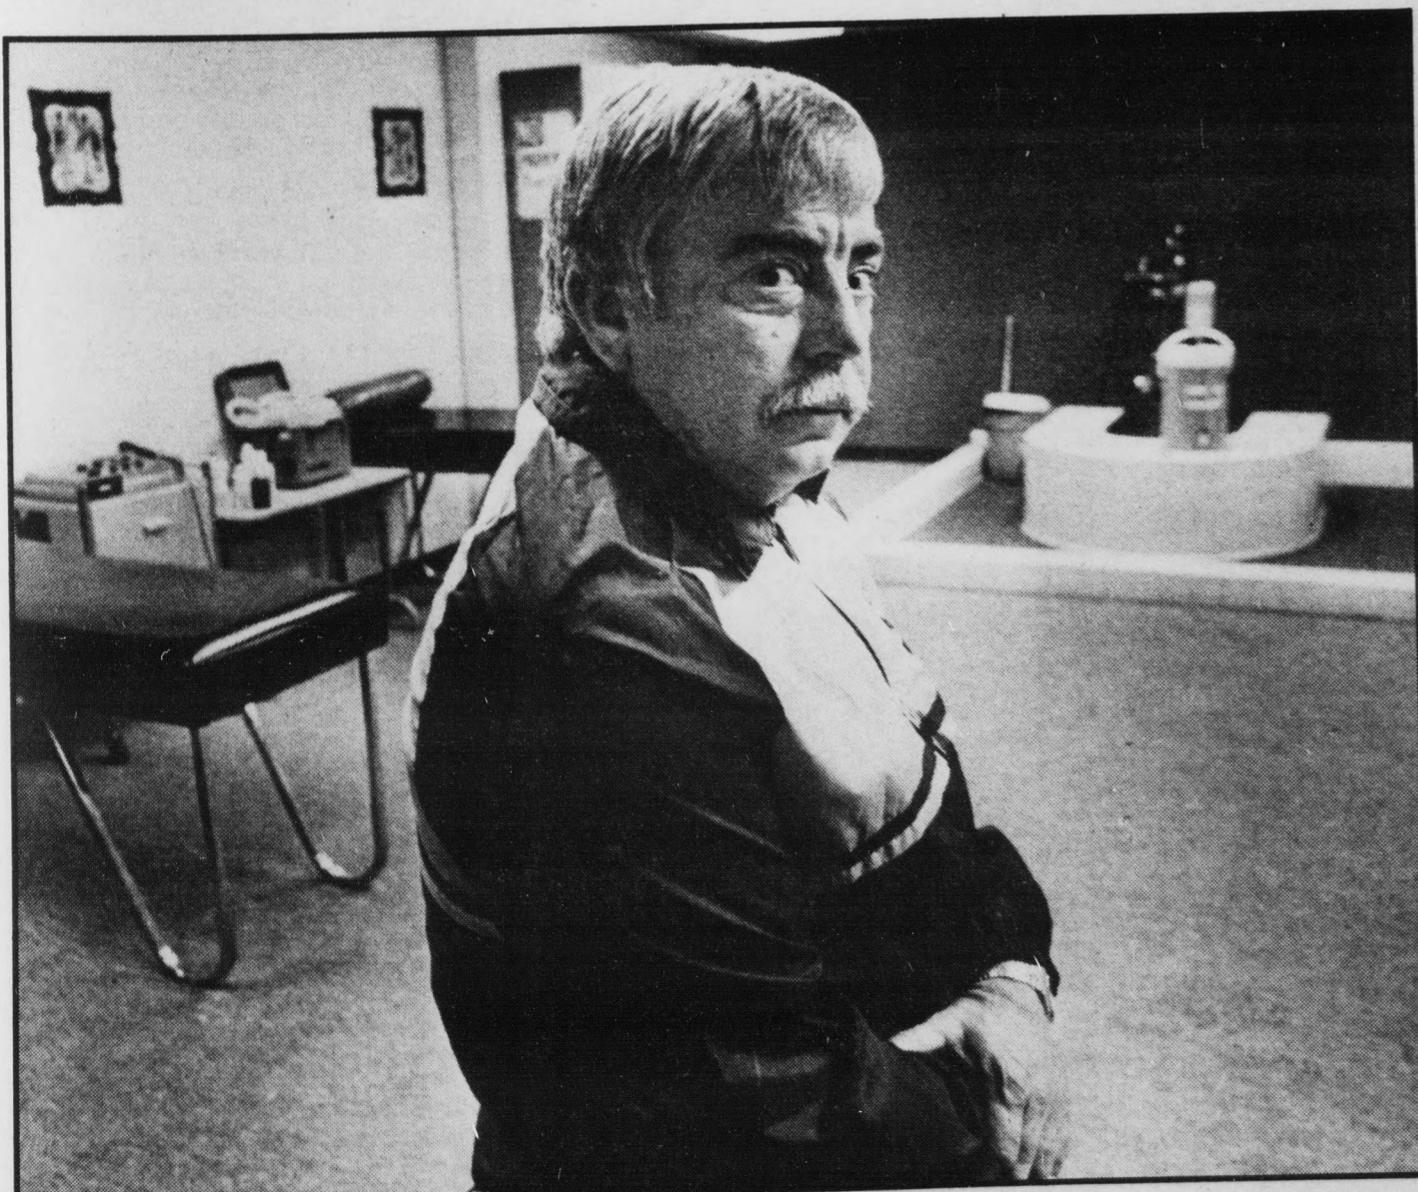

"It was an awesome feeling," he recalls fondly. "It was really something."

For Hunter, a longtime Alta Loma resident, the moment ranks as one of his most memorable to date in an association with U.S. track and field teams, an association which also has taken him to such diverse places as Japan, China, the Soviet Union and Canada.

But if Hunter was moved by those opening ceremonies in a foreign land, he expects the emotional impact will be all the greater when he is on U.S. soil for the opening of the 1984 Olympics.

Hunter, 44, won't get to march in with the athletes this time, but he will be on the floor of the Los Angeles Coliseum, site of the track and field events Aug. 3-12, as the athletes this time, but he will be on the floor of the Los Angeles Coliseum, site of the track and field events Aug. 3-12, as the coordinator for trainers during the Olympic competition.

"I would think this is going to be the biggest event of my career," acknowledges Hunter calmly as he looks forward to the challenge facing him and his colleagues.

"There will be lots of responsibilities, and the pressure will come, I'm sure. Our medical team will be on display to the world, and it's very important that we do things correctly."

Hunter doesn't anticipate confronting any missions impossible, although he says there could be some surprises.

"When you're working one of these big meets, there's always something that comes up that you're not really expecting," says the Homer Thompson protege who has been a trainer since 1965 and at Chaffey College since 1969.

"You just have to go with the flow, go around whatever happens and try to make the best of it."

"We'll have a crash cart, stretchers and anything we might need to remove any athlete without complications or problems."

Working with athletes from foreign nations isn't a problem, Hunter says.

"They're very appreciative of anything we do for them," he explains. "They don't have the facilities and equipment that we do to take care of an athlete."

There will be nine trainers at the Coliseum, divided into a trio of three-man teams. It will be Hunter's task to make sure the teams are alert to any injuries or problems connected with the on-going track events and to render athletes aid with as little delay as possible.

The trainers will be equipped with walkie-talkies to facilitate communication.

"The three teams will have to be on top of everything that happens during the competition," says Hunter. "We can't be gawkers, looking up in the stands or watching some event and then miss somebody getting hurt."

"But all of the people who will be there are professionals," he emphasizes. "They've done this before, and they won't be awed by the competition as they do their job."

Because of the scope of his tasks, Hunter expects to be on or near the Coliseum site for as many as 15 hours a day (7:30 a.m. to 11:30 p.m.) during an eight-day period.

But with a built-in three-hour break (1-4 p.m.) each day, Hunter believes any job stress will be alleviated.

"It'll be like a cakewalk compared to what trainers do at their own school," says Hunter. "We normally don't have a three-hour break during the day. Other times we might come in at 8 o'clock in the morning and leave at midnight after a football or basketball game."

"If we were going straight through all day, we'd probably have to have another group of trainers come in because the first group would be on their feet all day."

"But given the break, we can eat, relax and lay down for a couple of hours if we want."

Hunter's responsibilities will center on the Coliseum competition in August, but there is plenty more work to be done before then.

As a prelude to the Coliseum competition, Hunter will be in charge of coordinating efforts of 45-50 trainers at nine Southland sites, including L.A. Southwest, Santa Monica, West L.A., Pierce and Occidental colleges; Dorsey High School, Drake Stadium at UCLA, Cal State L.A. and Cromwell Field at USC.

"I'll be checking with each of the training sites and workout areas to make sure they are manned by trainers and see to it they have everything they need," notes Hunter.

Hunter and staff will have the benefit of additional experience with competition at the Coliseum in June.

"We'll have the TAC (The Athletic Congress) Championships at the stadium June 14-16," informs Hunter, "and the Olympic Trials June 24-27."

Hunter, whose graying hair belies his nickname, came into the job as Olympic coordinator of trainers for track and field after the death of Citrus College colleague Tony Russo of a heart attack last April.

Gail Weldon, Los Angeles-based coordinator for all trainers for all sports in the Olympics, asked Red if he would help her. Hunter said yes, and the plans have been evolving ever since.

The experience figures to be the most rewarding of Hunter's nearly two decades of working with athletes.

IT'S UP TO YOU.

Give it to IRS. Or, keep it.

It's your money. You can reduce your 1983 taxable gross income by up to $4,000, or at least by $2,000. You can, that is, when you open your IRA Account at one of our offices prior to April 15, 1984 (technically you have until the following day, Monday, April 16, 1984).

SINGLE OR MARRIED.

If you are married and your spouse doesn't work, you can save up to $2,250. Take $2,250 right off the top of your 1983 taxable income. If you both work, you each can save $2,000—a total of $4,000 right off the top. If you are single and employed, you can save up to $2,000.

YOU ARE ENTITLED TO IT.

Southwest's IRA Account is available to every American wage earner. Even if you are covered by a pension plan where you work (including a government job), or a Keogh Plan, you are entitled to have your own Individual Retirement Account so you can save tax-deferred, high interest-earning money towards your retirement.

IT'S DEDUCTIBLE & TAX-DEFERRED.

The benefits of your IRA are immediate and real: You reduce your taxable income each year by the amount you put in your IRA, usually resulting in fewer income taxes to pay. And, the money you save in your IRA, and the high interest it earns, are tax-deferred until you withdraw funds anytime after age 59½. Whatever you withdraw is taxed as ordinary income, and at the lower rates you most likely will enjoy after retirement. Penalties are required, by law, for earlier withdrawals.

It's up to you: Either (1) Pay taxes on all of your 1983 income, or (2) Open your IRA and save tax-deductible dollars—earning high interest—for your retirement.

If you prefer No. 2, please see us. We can help.

Frank Grossi of Upland lifts the front wheels of his 1969 Camaro during a race at the 24th annual Winternationals.

far as receivers Mike Sheridan, sophomore from Upland (.253), and Mike Feer, freshman from Alta Loma, are concerned. A third prospect, Fontana Gary Smith, lends further depth.

If the Panthers are deep in pitching and catching, the same cannot be said yet of the infield. Chaffey has just five players (pitchers excluded) in the picture at the moment.

Freshman Bill Lutz (Redlands) appears to have the third base job, and switch-hitting Mike Curry (Compton), another freshman, has the inside track at shortstop.

Sophomore Joji Kijima (Aquinis) and freshman Darren Monroe (Upland) are vying for the second base job, while Compton College transfer Ken Coates holds forth at first.

Coates, who hits from the left side, may platoon at the position with the right-handed hitting Pignotti.

The Panther outfield blends experience with youth. Old hands are sophomores Mark McGrath (Don Lugo), Jeff Dahlstrom (Upland) and Sierra College transfer Larry Avila (Alta Loma).

New faces in the Panthers' outfield could be freshmen John Dillon (Serrano), Fitzgerald Williams (Walnut) and Darryl Collins (Ontario).

"I think we'll hit the ball all right," Lowder sums up, "but we have to come along defensively. Our pitching will help solidify the defense."

For Lowder, the start of the season will mark a personal comeback of sorts. He had triple bypass heart surgery last Sept. 29, then returned to school Nov. 3.

"I'm in good shape now," Lowder reports.

Champ puts Grossi out

There was no question the 24th annual Winternationals were a rousing success. Three new champions were crowned and National Hot Rod Association officials turned away fans for the first time in 33 years.

But for Upland's Frank Grossi, the day ended earlier than he wanted. Competing in the Super Stock Eliminator category, the Camaro driver failed to duplicate his World Finals victory. Grossi was eliminated in the second round by eventual winner Dave Meredith.

Gary Ormsby won his first national event in Top Fuel competition, while Al Segrini was the Funny Car victory. Lee Shepherd continued his domination in the Pro Stock category by winning his 26th title.

Let's hear it for the Hippocratic oath

By Samuel J. Tolmasoff

Those of us who live in the West Valley should be thankful for the many good doctors available to us and the hospitals where we can get treatment.

I ought to know — I've been a paying guest at four of them in the last couple of years. And I did get very good treatment in all of them.

The last time was only a few weeks ago. I had eye surgery — a lens implant — and I was classified as an "outpatient" — I didn't have to stay overnight.

But hospital regulations are very strict and strictly enforced. After the surgery I could have walked back to my room easily — but no, I had to be loaded onto a gurney, wheeled back and transferred to my bed.

In the process one of the nurses aides grabbed my left leg, which is very tender from an old injury, and I let out a yelp that could have been heard two blocks away.

"What's wrong with your leg?" she asked.

Since sustaining the injury to my leg I must have explained a hundred times. The leg is painful and I can't put too much weight on it, but rather than explain again, I thought I'd try something different.

"I'm awfully sorry, ma'am," I said. "But I have a highly contagious form of leprosy on that leg and —"

Before I had a chance to say any more, that gal was gone.

Within a few minutes an RN entered and proceeded to give me a tongue lashing.

"Leprosy is not contagious," she informed me. "And you don't have leprosy."

She then proceeded to give me a treatise on leprosy. It was very informing.

But that poor nurses' aid never did come back into my room. If she reads this, she has my heartfelt apology and I'd like to assure her she doesn't have leprosy.

I have been to many doctors over the past seven years and I have found that they are quite human. Some run sort of a production line, but many of them are very dedicated and might even believe in the Hippocratic oath. Refer to yourself as a patient, never a customer.

There are two doctors whom I would especially like to dedicate this too. The first is Dr. Bonifacio Regis — who has a clinic here in Ontario.

I had a bad infection in my injured leg — I'd been to several doctors and they had diagnosed that as dermatitis. Dr. Regis diagnosed it for what it was and got me to a hospital, but fast, as I was within a few days of having gangrene. He even called in a specialist to help me out at the hospital and now we have it under control.

The main reason I'm referring to Dr. Regis is he specializes in senior citizens. I'm a senior citizen myself — being 169 years old, give or take a century. Believe it or not, he'll even make house calls in an emergency!

The other is Dr. Milton Miller, ophthalmologist. I would be blind now if it weren't for him and his assistants. He's been instrumental in the development of the intraocular lens implant. I had cataracts in both eyes. He removes the cataracts and the lens of the eye, then implants an artificial lens. I don't profess to know much about vision care, but next to life, sight is the most precious gift.

Now when I wake up in the morning I can see — read newspapers and books and drive without glasses.

And if I gaze into the distance I can clearly see the azure sky and the white mantle of Old Baldy's snowy crest. □

Navajo weaving on display in Ontario

By Joy Sommer

"The Golden Age of Navajo Weaving" will preview at the Museum of History and Art in Ontario on Feb. 10 at 7:30 p.m.

The special preview will include a slide show and lecture on the subject by Professor Emeritus Robert Fleck.

Fleck, who is both a painter and retired teacher, is considered an expert in the field of Navajo weaving.

"It's an outstanding example of antique Navajo Indian rugs and blankets, being shown for the first time through the courtesy of three local collectors," Fleck said.

Included in the collection are the three phases of development of the rare chief's blanket as well as examples from the Yei, Yeibichai, Germantown, Teec Nos Pos, Two Gray Hills and 13 other Southwest reservations.

"These are old rugs," Fleck said. "Most of them are prior to 1910. Examples of early work with the natural dyes made from roots and seeds are in marked contrast to the ones made when the yarn was bartered from traders from back East. That's where the brighter colors come from."

"Designs also vary according to where the weavers lived on the reservation. These rugs are in remarkably good condition," he said.

Accenting the weaving will be several examples of Southwest Indian pottery. The exhibit is being prepared by David and Kim Svenson.

The exhibition will run from Feb. 11 to May 31 in the Carlson Room. Gallery hours are Thursday through Saturday, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday 2 to 4 p.m.

Afghanistan, to help fill the demand. Theo Davis of Upland, told me of having a Karakul wool saddle blanket that served him well for over 30 years of use.

Then, within a short time, Karakul pelts and wool became no longer fashionable. Sales fell to near zero, and the operation came to a halt. Investors had the choice of eating crow or mutton. Most ate both. The Ontario Salon location has now been the home of Richards Beauty College, for a number of years.

Other "Get Rich Quick" ideas have included the raising of Mink or Chinchillas. But after one has skinned his stock, they don't grow a new skin. So, what do you continue with?

The old fellow on TV, who speaks of Smith-Barney, says, "We make money the old way." He probably means, "Buy low, sell high." That really works most every time one does it. It's better than some other attempts.

Clarinetist wins position in All-State Honors Band

By Matt Coker

When Shannon Cripps learned she had been named to the California All-State Honor Band, it was music to her ears.

The Etiwanda High School clarinet player said she always wanted to be "one of the best" and the honor bestowed on the 15-year-old by the California State Band Directors Association means she is well on her way.

The sophomore, captain of the woodwinds section of the Marching Eagle Regiment, said it was not even her own idea to try out for the honor band, which about 700 students from all over the state apply for by sending in tapes of a musical selection.

The thrill of being one of the best in the state is something Cripps need only ask her band director about.

"I was in an all-state band in high school," Lee said. "Everyone there is serious about music."

"I want to major in music in college depending on if I can be a success," Cripps said. "Even though, I'll still play because I love it."

Cripps' selection to the honor band comes as icing on the cake for the Etiwanda band program, which has surprised a lot of people in this, its first year.

Without a senior in the outfit (or the school for that matter), the band — made up of three juniors and 57 sophomores and freshmen — have been awarded 14 trophies in field tournaments, including four

"I want to major in music in college depending on if I can be a success," Cripps said.

Doug Lee, the EHS band director, approached Cripps at summer band practice and suggested she try out for the honor band. To qualify, she had to record a tape of Brahms' "Sonata in F" and have it submitted by Dec. 1.

Luckily, the Alta Loma resident of two years, who is also the concert mistress for the school's symphony band, had already been practicing that selection with her private instructor, Ted Burton of Alta Loma Music.

But since she had found out about the honor band in July, it gave her that much more time to perfect the tune on the instrument she has been playing since the sixth grade.

"I thought it would be good experience," she said of her motives behind trying out for the honor band. "I'd like to be real good at the clarinet."

She and 200 other All-State finalists will take part in a competition Feb. 17 in Santa Cruz to determine first and second band members. Those chosen for the best band will play in April at the California Music Educator's Convention in Long Beach.

sweepstakes and three first place finishes.

While he is pleased, it does not surprise Lee, considering the amount of parental support his unit has received. Cripps mother serves as the vice-president of the band's booster club.

"In six months the boosters raised $12,000," Lee said. "Of course, we've already spent $11,000 of it."

Support has also propelled Cripps, who as a freshman was enrolled at Chaffey High School. She credits her fellow band members and mother for helping her to attain the prestigious selection.

"The band supports me a lot," she said. "But I think my mother is the one who really pushed me to do it. She said 'Just do it. At least you'll know what it's like.'"

And she hopes there will be more experiences like the one she is encountering with the All-State Honor Band.

"I'm interested (in music) for life. It is one of my ambitions." □
